

According to legend, a cruel giant named Druon Antigoon who was so large that his legs straddled the banks of the Scheldt river in Antwerp would stop boats entering the harbor and demand a toll. For those who refused, he severed one of their hands. One day a Roman soldier named Siloius Brabo cut off Antigoon's hand and tossed it into the river. According to folklore this legend is the origin of the name Antwerp: "hand werpen" meaning "hand thrown."
