

WATOU CUVÉE

Cuvée (pronounced koo-vay') is a wine and beer term, derived from the French word 'cuve' meaning barrel or tank. Mostly the name is used for a blend of the best base beers for a second fermentation. The experienced blender is able to awaken the finest nuances with his cultivated knowledge through the blending process. In fact, the ambitious blend of different styles, when successfully merged, creates a delightful palate for the sophisticated beer enthusiast.

Brewery Van Eecke named Tripel 8 Cuvée Watou, in honor of the village of Watou where they have been brewing since 1624!

DENSITY
8% ABV

MALT
3 varieties of aromatic malt

HOPS
4 varieties of local Popering hops

FERMENTATION
High fermentation ale

TYPE
Hoppy Ale

Compared to their flagship ale, the 10% Tripel ABT, this Tripel Cuvée Watou has a mild alcohol percentage of only 8%, but with a full flavor, a malty taste and a subtle presence of Popering hops.

Although this beer is recognized as a strong Belgian blond, you'll discover a lightly sour-sweet yeasty fruit on a par with mildly malts and a refreshing flow of really fragrant, fruity hops with a mild bitterness.

The finishing undertone is slightly tangy to render an intriguing contrast with the smooth flowery aftertaste, light on the carbonation, just sufficient to render a refreshing palate, against a medium body and moderate flavor profile.
